Dear Friend and Colleague,

It is with great enthusiasm that I personally invite you to the 9th International Association of Clinical Research Nurses Annual Conference! This year’s theme is Clinical Research Nursing: Incorporating Professional Scope and Standards of Practice to Advance the Coordination and Care of Research Participants.

The IACRN conference offers you an opportunity to network with international clinical research nurses, exchange best practices and learn from experts. Many prominent speakers, along with information-packed workshops, will fill the agenda. We would be delighted to have you join us at this conference to hear what our national and international colleagues have to share about clinical research.

As IACRN makes strides to advance clinical research nursing practice globally, I encourage you to become involved. You will hear important updates from the Board and Committee Chairs during the Annual Business Meeting on Thursday. This may help you identify an area of interest.

I look forward to the opportunity to learn and celebrate clinical research nursing with you!

Most Sincerely,

Margaret McCabe, PhD, RN

Wednesday, October 18, 2017 Pre-Conference

7:00am - 6:00pm  Registration
11:30am - 12:30pm  Lunch (on your own)
8:00am - 4:00pm  Track 1—The CRN as Study Coordinator: Overview of Responsibilities
Elizabeth Ness, MS, BSN, RN, National Cancer Institute
Brian Beardslee, MSN, RN, Dana-Farber Cancer Institute
Deborah Grady, MS, RN, CCRC, National Cancer Institute
Clinical Research Nurses (CRNs) have many roles within the clinical research enterprise. One role is that of the study coordinator. The CRN study coordinator’s (CRNSC) role is multi-faceted and may vary based on the clinical research setting. As a member of the research team, the CRNSC ensures: adherence to the ethical standards for clinical and research care, protocol compliance, integrity of the informed consent process, appropriate management of clinical research participants, management of source and essential documents, integrity of the research data, and appropriate financial stewardship. This all-day Pre-Conference workshop will provide an overview of these various responsibilities of a novice (<2 years CRNSC). The responsibilities of the CRN study coordinator will be woven throughout these important topics.

8:00am - 4:00pm  Track 2
Ethical and Regulatory Considerations in the Genomic Era (8:00am - 11:30am)
Kathleen Calzone, PhD, RN, AGN-BC, FAAN, National Cancer Institute
Georgie Cusack, MS, RN, AOCNS, National Heart Lung Blood Institute
Sharon Flynn, MS, RN, ANP-BC, AOCNS, BMTCN, National Institutes of Health
Elucidating the role of genomic variation in health, disease risk, illness, and treatment response has the potential to revolutionize the scope of information generated from clinical research. Genomic science and technologies influence the entire healthcare continuum and are fundamental components of research. This presentation explores the fundamentals of genomics impact on conducting research including the regulatory considerations.

Leadership Development: Are You Up for the Challenge? (12:30pm - 4:00pm)
Georgie Cusack, MS, RN, AOCNS, National Heart Lung Blood Institute
Sharon Flynn, MS, RN, ANP-BC, AOCNS, BMTCN, National Institutes of Health
This Pre-Conference session will utilize several tools to describe leadership development concepts and competencies. Clinical Research Nurses (CRNs) will receive training on the creation of a mission and vision statement and an individual leadership development plan. Tools for self-assessment of leadership style and emotional intelligence will aid them in identifying their personal leadership strengths and limitations. CRNs will be provided information on the essential components of collaboration and teamwork including professional communication, problem-solving techniques, and the basics of leading a meeting. The ability to assess the professional climate and influence change will assist in strategic planning for future growth of the organization. Finally, CRNs will be taught how to develop an action plan and select a mentor. Leadership development and mentorship of CRNs at all levels within the specialty strengthen coalitions and support organizational goals.

8:00am - 4:00pm  Track 3—The Art of Advocacy: Putting CRN Scope and Standards into Action in your Institution
Shaunagh Browning, MSN, RN, FNP-BC, Georgetown University
Alec J. Stone, MA, MPA, Oncology Nursing Society
Lauren Inouye, MPP, RN, American Association of Colleges of Nursing
The Scope and Standards of Practice for Clinical Research Nurses was approved by the ANA in August 2016. The publication of the Scope and Standards was the first step in providing a tool for Clinical Research Nurses to “guide specialty nurses in the application of their professional knowledge, skills, and responsibilities (ANA, 2016)”. The challenge now lies in application of this document in local settings where CRNs practice. Nurses have been ranked the most trusted professional in the Nation for the 15th year in a row (ANA, 2016). Nurses work hard to advocate for patients, but it is not clear they have the necessary skills to advocate effectively for their own practice issues (Tomajan, 2012). This pre-conference will introduce CRNs to political competency and basic advocacy skills that can be applied to their practice settings to affect policy change. Empowering nurses to have critical conversations in an effective manner will help disseminate the important role of the CRN. Using the Scope and Standards as a foundation, talking points and tools will be developed for use in role play at the pre-conference and for use in the CRNs practice setting. Expanding on these advocacy concepts will also provide the skills to have similar conversations at the governmental level, both locally and nationally.
