Member Spotlight

The increased complexity of clinical research presents challenges not only for seasoned research nurses, but also for those new to the field. Brian's advice for those new to research is to "connect with a mentor, be active in IACRN, and participate in any available educational opportunities." Our role as clinical research nurses is to "increase our visibility as healthcare advances to address and treat the world's healthcare needs".

Brian Beardslee, MSN, RN

Program Nurse/Clinical Research Nurse

Early Drug Development Center

Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, Boston MA

Member of the Marketing and Membership, Education and Conference Planning Committee for IACRN

Committee Member Spotlight

As for the future of research nursing, Carolynn states, "with the evolving evidence about the nursing roles across settings and research that contributes to documenting the value of nursing, the pendulum may swing back toward a logical preference for nurses in clinical research roles. I know nurses working in pharma, the FDA, the NIH, CROs, private sites and academic medical centers and they were all nurses first! Bioinformatics and genomics will open many new avenues in clinical research. Nurses can make unique contributions to the clinical research enterprise as it is evolving!"

Carolynn Thomas Jones, DNP, MSPH, BSN, RN

Associate Professor of Clinical Research Nursing

Ohio State University

IACRN Member for the past 8 years

Co-Chair of the Research Committee
